MAKE THE SIN TAX BILL A TRUE REFORM BILL

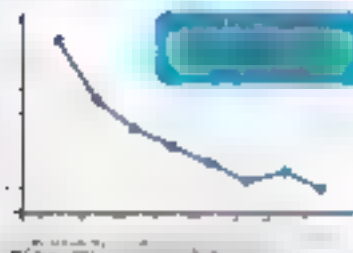

The Sin Tax Bill being pushed by the Aquino administration is a Reform Bill.

It is intended to reform the flaws of the prevailing excise tax system on "sin products" particularly tobacco, which has been in place since 1996 or for sixteen years now. For such a long period, only a few companies led by a monopoly that controls 94% of the market have enjoyed the larger portion of the benefits, to the detriment of the Government, the consumers, the farmers and new entrants.

What key reform issues are sought to be addressed by the proposed measure?

1) FALLING GOVERNMENT REVENUES

Excise Tax Collection as % of GDP

The following table shows that the excise tax collection has been declining steadily since 1996. The government's revenue from the tobacco industry has been declining steadily.

2) UNEVEN PLAYING FIELD

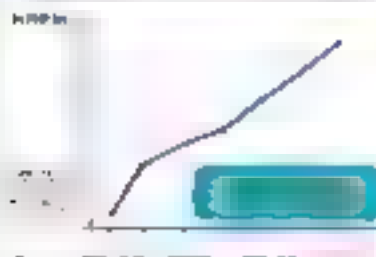

State of Competition in the Industry

There is a significant concentration of the tobacco industry in the hands of a few companies, which has led to an uneven playing field.

3) UNEVEN DISTRIBUTION OF INDUSTRY BENEFITS

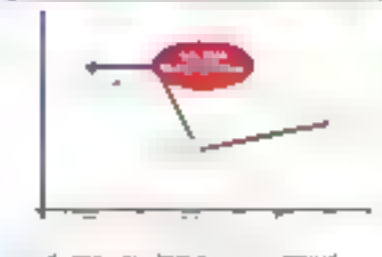

Industry Income Growth: Before and After the Sin Tax

The tobacco industry has been able to increase its income steadily over the years. This is due to the fact that the industry has been able to increase its production and sales.

4) FLIGHT OF TOBACCO FARMERS

The tobacco monopoly is hurting the farmers.

The number of tobacco farmers has been declining steadily over the years. This is due to the fact that the tobacco industry has been able to increase its production and sales, which has led to a decrease in the number of farmers.

UNDOUBTEDLY, THE TOBACCO EXCISE TAX SYSTEM IS BROKEN AND IT NEEDS TO BE FIXED NOW!

Support the Government's push for Sin Tax Reform - for the Philippines, for farmers, and for fair market practices.

Figure 1 consists of 12 panels, labeled (a) through (l), each showing a line graph of \log_{10} CFU/g versus time in hours. The y-axis for all panels ranges from 0 to 10. The x-axis for all panels ranges from 0 to 120 hours. The graphs illustrate the effect of various treatments on the growth of E. coli O157:H7 in ground beef. Panel (a) shows a control with no treatment, where the bacterial load increases from approximately 1.5 to 8.5 \log_{10} CFU/g over 120 hours. Panels (b) through (l) show the effect of different concentrations of NaOH, NaOCl, and H₂O₂, as well as combinations of these treatments. The data shows that higher concentrations of NaOH and NaOCl lead to faster and more complete inactivation of the bacteria. H₂O₂ alone shows a slower, more gradual reduction in bacterial load.

Figure 1 is a Western blot image showing the expression of p115 and p110 in four different tissues: Kidney, Liver, Muscle, and Brain. The blot is probed with anti-p115 and anti-p110 antibodies. On the left side, molecular weight markers are indicated in kilodaltons (kDa): 110, 100, 90, 80, and 70. For each tissue, there are two lanes: one probed with anti-p115 (left lane of each pair) and one with anti-p110 (right lane of each pair). In the Kidney and Liver lanes, both p115 and p110 bands are visible at approximately 115 kDa. In the Muscle and Brain lanes, only the p115 band is visible at approximately 115 kDa, while the p110 band is absent.

Keep it hot and healthy

By Suzanne Phillips

The winter months are a time when many people experience aches and pains, especially in the joints. This is often due to the cold weather, which can cause the blood vessels to constrict, reducing the flow of blood to the joints. As a result, the joints can become stiff and painful. However, there are several ways to keep your joints warm and healthy during the winter months. One of the most effective ways is to exercise regularly. Exercise helps to keep the joints moving and the blood flowing, which can help to reduce the stiffness and pain. Another way to keep your joints warm is to wear warm clothing, especially in the areas of the joints. This can help to keep the joints warm and prevent them from becoming stiff and painful. Finally, it is important to stay hydrated during the winter months. Drinking plenty of water helps to keep the joints lubricated and can help to reduce the stiffness and pain.

near-baked spa treatments—just a half-hour session of heat and moisture can help to relax the muscles and improve circulation. And, if you're looking for a more active way to stay warm, try a hot yoga class. The combination of heat and movement can help to loosen up the joints and improve flexibility.

An encounter with a 'talking leaf'

By Suzanne Phillips

When I was a child, I was always fascinated by the way a leaf could "talk" to you. It was as if the leaf had a secret language of its own, and I was the only one who could hear it. This fascination led me to a career in botany, and I have spent the last 20 years studying the way plants communicate with each other and with the environment.

One of the most interesting things I have discovered is that plants can actually "talk" to each other. They can send signals to each other through their roots, and they can even release chemicals into the air that can be picked up by other plants. This is a completely new way of thinking about plants, and it has led to a lot of new research in the field of plant communication. I have found that plants can be very smart, and they can adapt to their environment in ways that we humans can only begin to understand. This has led me to a new way of thinking about the world around us, and I believe that it will lead to many more discoveries in the future.

In the past few years, there has been a growing awareness among the general public that the environment is being degraded by human activities. This awareness has led to a demand for more information about environmental issues and for action to be taken to protect the environment.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has responded to this demand by developing a series of publications that provide information on various environmental topics. One of these publications is "Environmental Quality Indicators," which provides a comprehensive overview of the state of the environment and the factors that are affecting it.

This publication is divided into two main sections. The first section, "The State of the Environment," provides a detailed overview of the current state of the environment, including air quality, water quality, land use, and wildlife. The second section, "Factors Affecting the Environment," discusses the various factors that are contributing to environmental degradation, such as population growth, industrial development, and agricultural practices.

"Environmental Quality Indicators" is a valuable resource for anyone interested in learning more about the environment and the challenges we face. It provides a clear and concise summary of complex issues and offers practical suggestions for how we can all contribute to protecting our planet.
